Co. Sales Tax Is Enacted

Following public hearings in Salinas this morning, the County Board of Supervisors enacted the unified sales and use tax ordinance for Monterey County, made possible by the Bradley-Burns Act of the California State Legislature. This empowers the county to collect sales and use taxes in the unincorporated area of the county up to one percent. It is estimated that this will yield $277,000 yearly to the county.

Carmel merchants and those in other incorporated cities will not be affected by the county tax in that they already collect a one cent sales tax for the city. After July 1, when the ordinance becomes effective, the merchants in the cities will remit the one percent city sales tax collections to the state along with the state sales taxes. The state will rebate to the cities their one percent, less collection costs.

There will be a slight loss in revenue to Carmel, Larry Rose, city clerk, told the Pine Cone. The cost of state collection runs one and seven tenths to two percent, whereas cost for Carmel to collect its own tax has been less than one percent. "We had the lowest cost of all the cities of the county. Our collection was 99.3 percent efficient," Larry Rose told the Pine Cone.

The county will not share in any of Carmel's sales tax revenue since Carmel has a full one percent tax, and like all the other cities of the county, has decided not to part with any of it.

Editor's Column

Pressure has been removed from several community sore spots this week. Firestone Company announced through its local representative, Captain Frank McDonald, that it has given up the idea of establishing a guided missile laboratory in the Hatton property east of Highway One, where Carpenter Street intersects. Citizens objected to the use of this land for any but residential purposes. Over six hundred signed a petition opposing the location as a site for the Firestone project and Carmel Board of Realtors opposed it officially. Firestone, temporarily located in the American Legion quarters in Monterey, will seek another site—not in the Carmel sphere of influence—and Monterey Chamber of Commerce promises to leave no stone unturned, put forth every effort, put its shoulder to the wheel, and all pull together to find a site for Firestone on their side of the hill.

Caleb Haynes Makes Pitchblende Strike

Caleb V. Haynes, son of Major and Mrs. C. V. Haynes, graduated from the Colorado School of Mines in Golden on May 25, and, with fellow student, Glen A. Boyd, discovered a pitchblende deposit in the foothills of the Rockies, 25 miles from Golden.

Major Haynes drove to Golden for his son's graduation and brought him back to Carmel for a week. Caleb's wife, Elizabeth, is with him and their ten months old daughter, also called Elizabeth. They leave today for a visit with Elizabeth's parents in Los Angeles before flying back to Colorado where Caleb will take a postgraduate course in metallurgy this summer at Colorado School of Mines. He will also watch a company explore and develop the property on which his and Boyd's

Readings Start For Pharaoh In Forest Theater

Plans for the Forest Theater season are taking shape rapidly. The first production to be definitely decided upon this summer will be an Egyptian play, Pharaoh, by Herbert Heron, former Carmel mayor and founder of the Forest Theater, who has devoted much of his life to the production of poetic dramas.

Preliminary readings for parts will be held on the main stage of the Forest Theater Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. Besides the more important roles there are a dozen small parts, including an Arab servant, three Egyptologists (comedy), a young boy, some typical soldiers, several women, as well as musicians, dancers, guards, etc. Anyone wishing to act will be welcome, as will those who might care to serve on the staff with help in building and painting sets, making costumes, operating lights, or in any of the manifold works a big production requires.

Of the 22 Shakespeare productions in the Forest Theater, Heron has been responsible for 19. Besides these, he has staged a dozen other dramas of poetic quality, in addition to many prose plays. He has been prominent in local theater work for many years, and has served in every capacity from producer to ticket-seller, though his chief activities have been as director, designer and actor.

Heron is little known as a playwright, as no play of his has been staged in recent years. In the past, however, Carmel has seen a magnificent production of his Aztec drama, Montezuma, a tragedy of the Spanish conquest of Mexico, staged in the Forest Theater; a comedy of Carmel and its artists, Immortal Fame, in the old Arts and Crafts Theater; a masque of Robert Louis Stevenson, Tusitala, written in collaboration with John Northern Hilliard, given elaborate production in the Lake Theater at Del Monte, and the Forest Theater in Carmel; a romantic comedy of the days of George the Second of England, Love-Liars, written in collaboration with Constance Lindsay Skinner, the historian who planned and edited the great series of books on the American rivers, also produced in the Forest Theater. In addition to these, Heron has made exceptionally live and practical Forest Theater versions of Julius Caesar, Twelfth Night, and Hamlet. He re-wrote and greatly elaborated The First Poet and The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife. Now, after the lapse of several years, he again goes before the

June 6 Meeting On Master Plan Is Postponed

The Carmel Planning Commission with one dissenting voice, Chairman Frank Putnam's, voted Tuesday for a postponement of the Town Hall Meeting scheduled for June 6. At that time Larry Livingston, Jr., was to present his master plan for Carmel to the citizens.

The delay will allow time for a meeting of the citizens' committee with Livingston (June 6) when the planning commission hopes that he will be able to explain away the objections to the plan the citizens' committee raised before the planning commission last week.

Dr. Kirwan Saw India Advance To Independence In Government, Medicine

BY ELIZABETH LAWRENCE

Dr. Ernest E. W. O'Gorman Kirwan, Commander of the Indian Empire and Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons, has ventured across the 7000 foot high mountain passes which guard Nepal's legendary city, Khatmandu (Wood Temple) where last week a new king was crowned. He knows the Taj Mahal, the government palaces of New Delhi, and the byways of Calcutta. He has vacationed in Tibet (journeying by pony and yak) when that 10,000 foot plateau, ringed by precipitous mountain fastnesses, still was ruled by the Dalai Lama. He speaks Urdu, and a half dozen other Indian dialects. He has seen the best America has to offer, and he has traveled in France, Italy, Spain and Germany, and to many far-flung corners of what once was the British Empire. He has received from his monarch, the late King George V, the title, Commander of the Indian Empire, which places the letters, C.I.E., after his name. But Dr. Ernest E. W. O'Gorman Kirwan, C.I.E., M.D., and F.R.C.S., remains unmistakably and indubitably—an Irishman!

With all the splendor and pageantry of three continents before him, Dr. Kirwan—who was born in Dublin — still maintains that, "Ireland is the most beautiful of countries." For last autumn, while he was holidaying in County Kerry, Dr. Kirwan saw the Ring of Kerry — an Emerald Isle beauty spot where once a year every wayside bush flames with fuchsias. "Those silver-tongued Irish orators are telling the truth," insists this son of Dublin. "Ireland is beautiful—as beautiful as we Irishmen claim."

For the 16 years from 1929 to 1944, Dr. Kirwan was professor of ophthalmology at Calcutta University. From 1944 to 1954 he was lecturer at London University on tropical ophthalmology. Dr. Kirwan is an authority on tropical diseases of the eye, a noted surgeon, and a doctor who has been instrumental in training thousands of young Indian physicians in a country where diseases of the eye are a paramount problem.

Dr. and Mrs. Kirwan presently are occupying the Hatton Road home of Mrs. Dorothy M. L. Murray. Dr. Kirwan is now retired, and he and his wife, the former Mary Therkelsen of Portland, Oregon, last year visited Mrs. Murray's brother-in-law, cartoonist "Feg" Murray here. Dr. and Mrs. Kirwan succumbed to the charms of Carmel, and this year returned for a longer stay. They are considering buying a home here and may make Carmel their permanent retirement headquarters since a son, Peter, soon to be married, lives in San Francisco, and members of Mrs. Kirwan's family still reside in Portland. Another son, Dr. Ernest Kirwan, Jr., having completed his interneship, now is

PADRES CLIP KING CITY AND HOLLISTER; TIE FOR TITLE

Aided by King City's upset win over League-leading Gilroy, Carmel High's varsity baseball team came through with a fine stretch run to earn a tie for the CCAL B division baseball championship. Going into the final games on Monday, Carmel was tied with Hollister for second place and Gilroy enjoyed a one-game advantage in first place. However, last place King City put together a six-run rally in the sixth inning to dump Gilroy, 6 to 3, while the Padres put on their hitting shoes to club Hollister, 15 to 2. Since playoffs are banned by league edict, Carmel and Gilroy will share the baseball title and both schools will receive championship trophies.

In clinching a tie for the title, the Padres whipped King City, 7 to 0, last Friday and came back on Monday to hammer Hollister in a real slugfest. Dick Jennings, Carmel's all-league pitcher, hurled both wins and came within two outs of getting a no-hitter against King City. The hard-throwing righthander had one down in the top of the seventh when Joe Cozby, Mustang first-sacker, looped a single over the shortstop's head to break up the no-hitter. This was the second week in a row in which a no-hitter escaped Jennings in the last frame. Against Pacific Grove, the husky righthander breezed through no-hit no-run ball for six innings only to see the bubble burst in the last heat.

In Monday's runaway against Hollister, Jennings gave up three scratch hits and was in control all the way as his mates staked him to a big lead early in the game. Bob Michela, Carmel's all-league catcher, set a fine example for the Padre hitters in the first inning when he led off with a home run over the center field bank. Bob also hit a pair of triples and a single to enjoy his best hitting game of the season. Bill McCormack also hit the ball with real authority, driving in four runs while clubbing two for four.

Members of the Carmel High championship baseball squad are: Ron Huffman, Jim Konrad, Mike Mosolf, Dick Jennings, West Whittaker, Joe Mason, Mike Gahagan, Tim O'Shea, Bill Hook, Kyrk Reid, Andy Gray, Bob Michela, and Bill McCormack. Nine of these lads are seniors and will be missed around the campus next season.

THE SPORT WHEEL

Four Carmel High Players on All-League Baseball Team—Paced by unanimous selectees, Bob Michela and Dick Jennings, Carmel High placed four players on the mythical all-league team chosen by the coaches of the B division last Tuesday afternoon. Tim O'Shea, a dangerous hitting outfielder, garnered one of the outfield spots and Bill McCormack, clutch-hitting outfielder and first-baseman, was picked as utility outfielder. Jennings and Michela draw first place votes from all the coaches as did Gilroy's Ron Leonti at shortstop and Frank Felice at third base. Rounding out the all-league team were outfielders Jim Fahey (Gilroy) and Tony Calub (Gonzales), second baseman Tom Silva (Hollister), pitcher Julian Aguilar (Gilroy, utility infielder Eddie Estaban (Pacific Grove), and firse-baseman Bob Mazzuca (Gilroy).

Hollister Relays Set For Friday Afternoon and Evening — One of the most popular track and field events in Northern California, the Hollister Invitational Relays, is slated for tomorrow afternoon at the Hollister High oval. Starting at 4 o'clock, this trackfest finishes under the arcs and the final event won't be over until about 10:00 o'clock. Carmel High is sending several relay teams and individual performers in the varsity discus, shot, high jump, and broad jump. Coach Buzz Rainer is enthusiastic about his four-man hurdle relay team and figures they have a good chance to pick up medals in the shuttle event. The four timber-toppers who could get the job done are Roger Smith, Mike Mosolf, Dave Gray, and Mervin Sutton. All these lads can shade 10 seconds in the 70-yard highs. Carmel's two-mile relay quartet of Merv Sutton, Mike McCormick, Hampton Stewart and Art Wilkerson stands a good chance to finish in the money with each boy running a 2:08 half-mile.

Tim Grant CCAL Golf Medalist — A tiny freshman lad with a smooth golf swing, Tim Grant, took the Watsonville golf course apart in the CCAL championships, stroking a brilliant 72 for the tricky layout to earn a tie with Pacific Grove's Number One man for medalist honors. Carmel's Pete Mitchell was shooting par golf most of the way but ran into putting trouble the last four holes and finished with a creditable 74. Both golfers will be swinging for the Padres again next season and Coach John Westover's squad will be a solid threat for the league title.

Junior Legion Baseball Starts Saturday—Carmel's Post 512 Junior Legion baseball team swings into action this Saturday afternoon at Salinas, meeting the Salinas Legion at Rodeo Park in a 2:00 o'clock game. Starting with practically a brand new team this season, coaches Jack Giles and George Mosolf are putting the youngsters through their paces in daily practice sessions at the high school field. Bill McCormack is the only veteran from last season's squad and the hard-hitting outfielder should provide good hitting punch for the green squad. Vieing for positions on the squad are Joe Mason, Newt Rosenfeld, Fred Nelson, Mike Mitchell, Cim Conway, Parker Pollock, Bob Durbrow, Neil Giarratana, Mike Gahagan, Tim O'Shea, Mike O'Shea, Malcolm Burdis, Andy Beck and Andy Gray. The Junior Legion league is composed of teams from Monterey, Hollister, Salinas, and Carmel. Winner of this league goes on to the playoffs in San Francisco early in July.

"How old am I?"

asks Mrs. Harry Craig Wilder
2865 Jackson Street, San Francisco

Ever notice how young looking most women stay these days? One reason—and a big one: modern appliances. They're freeing women everywhere from chores that used to make them old too soon.

Take Mrs. Wilder, who leaves much of her hard work to appliances. She celebrated her 45th birthday this past month!

Makes sense, doesn't it, to put more and more of these automatic servants to work in your home? And here's the beauty of it: with gas and electricity so cheap in California, you can run a whole houseful of appliances all day long for less than the price of a jar of face cream.

Letters To The Editor

Postoffice Box 1812
Carmel, California
May 26, 1956

Dear Mrs. Cook:

May I add my name to the many others who are disturbed about changing lovely wooded Junipero? Junipero is something special, a bit of old Carmel. I enjoy its green gloom on foggy days and the dappled sunshine on sunny ones. Junipero is a street for little children and little animals, where the small fry ambush each other all day with joyous ack-ack-acks, and the older children play ball at dusk. Coming home at night, one catches glimpses of opossums and raccoons, and all too often one finds the body of a gray squirrel, victim to someone in a hurry.

To change all this into a motor speedway would be to lose something we all should want to cherish.

Sincerely yours,
Constance P. Low

JUNIPERO? NO!

Shoot if you must
  Through this old green grove,
But spare Junipero
  By Jove!

Aren't we still
  The selfsame villagers
Famed as the foes of Forest pillagers?

Don't we still feel worse
  Over moth-eaten oaks
Than over any chewed-up
  Mere mink cloaks?

Don't we still
  Label him as a churl
Who'd chop the home out
  From under the squirrel?

Don't we still love dells
  Where it looks as if elves
Could frisk in deep leaves
  And enjoy themselves?

And yet there are those Who've all but beguiled us
Into thinking the street that's
  The Idyllwildest,—
This Tanglewoodsiest avenue
  Is the one on which
To whisk us through!
  Who want this adorable
Bosky byway
  Turned into a glaring
Four-lane highway!

Wouldn't we all be Pretty demented
To make piney air
  So Ethyl-scented?

O Carmel, continue
  To play hard-to-get-to!
Not only that but
  Hard-to-get-THROUGH!

The Fahrneys Give Pleasing Concert

By Mary Lindsay-Oliver

The Musical Art Club and guests enjoyed the second program of the current season Saturday evening in the Carmel Art Association Galleries. Angie Machado is to be congratulated on the type of programs her management has presented so far. The purpose of the Club is to give promising young artists a hearing, and with the limited funds at its disposal, it is doing an excellent work for those just entering upon a concert career with need for kind encouragement and experience.

Ruth and Del Fahrney from Merced, accompanied by Arthur Wilson from San Francisco, proved themselves pleasing entertainers in a program that covered a wide range of composers, old and modern, in solos and duets. Ruth Fahrney's voice, though a bit heady in production, has lightness and charm, and she gave her numbers with expression and personality; while in the duets with her husband from The Marriage of Figaro, and others, including My Hero from the popular Chocolate Soldier, she showed full voice and flexibility.

Del Fahrney's baritone of rich musical quality held his audience throughout the program. The impressive Negro Spiritual Were You There? was so full of earnestness and honest strength of feeling for the subject that a quick applause seemed almost a sacrilege! In his group of German leider, the rhythm and flow of Schubert's Wohin was exceptional in persisted movement together with the playing of Arthur Wilson who admirably compassed the entire program. Fahrney's innate power. emotional projection and strong, friendly personality show possibilities that, with time and experience, can develope into first-rate artist's qualities. His audience responded with enthusiastic applause.

A small grand piano, courtesy of the Graham Music House, and use of the Gallery by courtesy of the Carmel Art Association, did much for the setting and enjoyment of this concert, followed by a social hour with refreshments.

Dr. Kirwan Saw India Advance In Medicine And Government

giving the two years of duty the British Government requires of all young British doctors.

Peter Kirwan, a graduate of Cambridge, and the Harvard School of Business Administration, is engaged in business in San Francisco with the California-Hawaiian Sugar Corporation. Soon he will marry Miss Mari Lee Hunt, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. L. J. Hunt of Tacoma, Washington.

During his years as professor of ophthalmology at Calcutta University, Dr. Kirwan saw India's dramatic advance toward independence. "The transfer was made without bitterness on either side, Dr. Kirwan says. He has only the very highest praise and admiration for Jawaharlal Nehru. "A striking personality, a man of intellect and vision, and one of the world's great leaders," is the way Dr. Kirwan described India's Prime Minister. To a question as to whether he felt that Prime Minister Nehru will retain his policy of neutralism in the face of constant wooing from both East and West, Dr. Kirwan said that he believed the Indian leader would remain neutral as he is a man of strong convictions and great independence. Dr. Kirwan spoke with warmth and admiration also of Jawaharlal Nehru's sister, Madame Pandit, now Indian ambassador to Great Britain. Dr. Kirwan, who had known the brilliant Indian woman in New Delhi, describes her as, "outstanding, a woman of great beauty and charm."

Much of the difficulty encountered just after the transfer of power was caused by the inherent, age-old conflicts between Hindus and Moslems. Two-thirds of India's four hundred million population are Hindus; the rest Mohammedans. And while every effort is being made at government levels to banish distinctions of caste, such transitions cannot be accomplished overnight, Dr. Kirwan feels. He spoke highly also of the Indian Army—a force once comprised of British officers and Indian troops. Now all echelons are Indian, and the Indian Army retains many traditions and characteristics which were inspired by the British.

Calcutta University has one of the biggest eye clinics in what—during Dr. Kirwan's time — still was part of the British Empire. "Glaucoma and cataracts abound in hot, tropical climates," Dr. Kirwan explains. "Many Indians require glasses at the age of 38 or 39, while westerners, in some cases, tend to go along for a few years longer without artifical aids to vision." Free medical care and surgery were provided at Calcutta University and Indians flocked by the thousands to the eye clinic to take advantage of both. While the prevalence of eye diseases was to be deplored, nevertheless their existence offered an unrivalled opportunity for study by the staff of the department headed by Dr. Kirwan. He spoke with admiration of the young Indian physicians being trained in Calcutta. "They have marvelous memories, so pass their tests admirably," Dr. Kirwan says. "They make splendid doctors, and the country now is in the position of training and equipping its own doctors. No longer does India require supervision by westerners in its hospitals and clinics." Dr. Kirwan spoke very favorably also of the programs instituted by the United Nations to bring contemporary medicine to India, and such efforts on the part of the world organization are welcomed there.

During World War II, Calcutta had base hospitals to which casualties from the Burma front were evacuated. Men were brought to Calcutta by air. Again, while the circumstances were to be regretted, the multitude of cases gave Calcutta doctors—British and Indian—an unparalleled opportunity to study patients in need of eye care.

In 1944, Dr. Kirwan left India temporarily, and flew to Washington to spend some time there with his wife and son. That same year Dr. Kirwan returned to England and accepted the post of lecturer in tropical ophthalmology at London University, continuing in that capacity for 11 years.

Dr. Kirwan, in addition to approving India's independence, had a word to say about the unification of a country even closer to his heart—his homeland, Ireland. "It should not be divided," he stated firmly. "I'm an Irishman so I can say so." The son of Patrick Joseph Kirwan, an official in the National Bank of Ireland, Ernest Kirwan spent his boyhood in his native Dublin. He was graduated from the National University of Ireland and the Royal College of Surgeons. He did post-graduate work in London, Vienna and New York. He first went out to India in 1911, serving with the Indian Medical Service. He was then 22 years old. During World War I he was with the British-Indian Army in Mesopotamia, and saw action on the northwestern frontier of India where the Turks were the enemy. He emerged from World War I a Major in the Medical Corps. After the first world conflict he became Professor of Ophthalmology at Calcutta University, continuing in the post until 1944.

Dr. Kirwan said that Europeans encounter no discomfort in living in India. Houses are handsome, air-conditioned and copiously staffed with servants. The caste system, however, causes some slight domestic problems. The servant who polishes boots, for instance, cannot touch food, and the one who serves dinner must never be required to sweep a veranda. However, life in India can be pleasant for Europeans, mainly because of the congeniality of high caste, well-educated Indians who receive westerners graciously into their homes. As to the climate — Dr. Kirwan says he has been far more uncomfortable in the humid heat of New York than during Calcutta's warmest days.

As to Carmel, while he will not admit it is more beautiful — or even as beautiful as County Kerry, Dr. Kirwan did say this: "In climate it reminds me of the hill stations in the Himalayas—areas like Darjeeling, some of the most magnificent country in the world, 7000 feet up, where Indians and Britishers take refuge from the heat."

After Peter Kirwan's June wedding to Mari Lee Hunt in San Francisco, Dr. and Mrs. Kirwan will visit Mrs. Kirwan's family in Portland, then a bit more traveling, and finally they will return to Carmel, possibly to make their home.

that the fantastic land swap proposed by Jean Arthur, by which she would receive the county land where the road curves around The Point for a homesite and give the county some of her land behind the site for a road "to eliminate a dangerous corner" will not take place. Balchin goes farther. He promises to propose including additional shore lands along The Point for acquisition as state park, extending the existing state park at Carmel River mouth.

Carmel was stunned at the Arthur proposal which would cut off a favorite view of Point Lobos for drivers and pedestrians using the county road around The Point. The Lobos League went on record opposing the swap; petitions were prepared and ready to circulate; and Carmelites were talking of chartering busses so they could go to Salinas in numbers to storm the county planning commission and board of supervisors.

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

Have your incandescent bulbs been burning out? This question headlined an advertisement in a 1911 issue of the Monterey Daily Cypress which we recently added to our local history collection. It goes on to list Mazda lamps of 60 watts at 95 cents each. And we thought everything was more expensive today! In many things we are right, because in those days men's Blucher shoes were selling for $2.45 and women's Imperial footwear was priced at $2.00. The Monterey Savings Bank was paying 3½% on savings accounts. At the Monterey Theatre the celebrated Mrs. Fiske was appearing in Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh, and the prices of seats ranged from one dollar to two. The advertisements in an old newspaper are often more interesting than the news.

Speaking of advertisements, if you watch the review magazines you will see that the prices of all types of books have gone up so fast in the past few years that it's enough to make library patrons out of the most confirmed book buyers. It certainly curtails the buying that the library is able to do. A dozen people are directly concerned with the choosing of books for this library, besides the many who fill out suggestion slips and leave them in the box provided for that purpose at the loan desk. Before you make out such a slip carefully consider if the book you are suggesting is really important for the library to have. Consider it from a community standpoint, not just your own. You may find yourself throwing away many a slip.

We have some interesting books going up to the examination shelves this Friday. Four new novels are, Too Near the Sun by Gordon Forbes; Honey from a Dark Hive by Bernice Kavinoky, Mano Majra by Khushwant Singh, and The Last Round by Frank O'Rourke. The Forbes book is laid in Southern California, the Singh, book is a prize novel from India, the O'Rourke one is a very good prize fight story.

Dr. Smiley Blanton says, ". . . without love we lose the will to live. Our mental and physical vitality is impaired, our resistance is lowered . . . what remains is a meager existence, emotionally so impoverished that we can only be called half alive". Dr. Blanton's new book is called Love or Perish.

Maude Adams, the woman for whom Sir James Barrie wrote Peter Pan, is the subject of a new biography by Phyllis Robbins, who was all her life a friend of Miss Adams. The book is a delightful picture of a truly great person, and is entitled Maude Adams.

Lew Ayres has just published a book on the religions of the eastern world, as he has studied and observed them during his travels. The book is called Altars of the East.

U.S. Camera, 1956, is really outstanding and this year it should be especially interesting to people of this area because it contains portfolios of work by Brett Weston and by Wynn Bullock.

We have a continuing order for the volumes of Winston Churchill's History of the English Speaking Peoples. We have just received volume one which is called The Birth of Britain, and covers the history of the country from its beginnings to the time of Richard III.

A report on a report is entitled The Hoover Report, 1933-1955, by McNeil and Metz. It gives a readable condensation of Mr. Hoover's report on the reorganization of the executive branch of our federal government.

There are several more to see this week. Come on in.

MAWDSLEYS OFF BY BOAT

Former city clerk Peter Mawdsley and Mrs. Mawdsley left Carmel on Tuesday to board a Johnson line freighter in Oakland. After stops in Stockton, San Francisco and Oakland, the boat will continue to Panama, through the Canal, and across the Atlantic to Sweden. There Peter and Lucie will leave the ship and go to England and Scotland visiting relatives and childhood friends for several months. Then to the Continent with practically every European country on their calling list. Christmas time will find them in Switzerland and then south to the warmer climate of Majorca where they will, possibly, remain for several months relaxing in the sun until the rest of Europe thaws or dries out in the spring. Then the Mawdsleys will resume their touring and return to Carmel after a few more months of sight-seeing. They expect to be away eight months to a year. If anyone would like their itinerary it's at the City Hall and Larry Rose, Peter's successor will be pleased to tell Carmelites where the Mawdsleys expect to be at stated times.

The Time Has Come .

By Kippy Stuart

In Mexico City, dedicated to Contract Bridge, it is a relief to get back into the garden where I am sure I won't slip up and trump my partner's ace. And who do you suppose was the first to greet me when I returned home? That impudent bluejay who bosses my premises. Of all the arrogant creatures I ever met this bluejay tops them all. I wrote the story of his downfall during the mating season when he became a henpecked husband, dutifully obeying the lady bluejay and subordinating his will to her own. It was ridiculous to watch the female demand attention and actually snatch food from the male's bill.

Well, the family must be raised by now and the Mister is once more his arrogant self. I have a regular vaudeville preformance out of my south window each afternoon. I will hear a tapping on the glass and there will be bluejay demanding attention. I do play mean tricks upon him by placing all sorts of things on the window sill. A piece of bread will throw him into a spasm of fury. He will stamp upon the bread, toss it aside, and that which he rejects, now, the lady bird is welcome to have. The old fellow wants peanuts and peanuts only. If I place only one peanut on the window sill and the female happens to get there first, it will be jerked from her bill and now, that she has lost her charm, she subsides without protest. If I place three peanuts on the sill, that arrogant bird will toss each one off, grab the last peanut, then fight the lady for the other two.

There is a new book in the Carmel Libary that is fascinating and informative, The Seeds of Life, by John Langon Davies. It is the story of sex in nature from the amoeba to man. It takes in the bird kingdom and explains that birds as well as animals cannot differentiate between sexes until the moment nature wishes to open their eyes. It tells how desperately the insects in a garden fight for survival, using plants and other insects for the purpose of propagating their kind. Nature clothes the male rather than the female in colorful habiliments, because in the animal and the bird kingdom, it is the female that makes the first move, fascinated by the colorful change in her lord's appearance. I wonder if this is so very different from the human kingdom? The lady always gets her man!

In the book, The Seeds of Life, the gardener's eyes are opened to wondrous happenings in his own garden and what may be a pain in the neck, by way of weeding and spraying, turns into a laboratory of scientific interest. The stories of how a virus or some forms of bacteria will fight for life can beat any Who Done It I've ever read. While The Seeds of Life is not strictly a garden book, I recommend reading this volume for full information of what is actually going on, not only in the world around us, but in our own individual selves as well.

Writers Advise New Writers At Club Dinner Meeting

Painstaking and persistent work, mixed with the right ingredients, make up creative writing which is lasting and informative, Betty MacDonald, nationally known writer of best sellers, told the Peninsula Branch of the forty-three-year-old California Writers Club at dinner in La Playa Hotel in Carmel Thursday evening. She stressed also the importance of "writing for the public" rather than for your well-meaning relatives and friends who are inclined to overpraise your writing output, adding: "It is better to refrain from showing your manuscripts to other than your agent or your editor."

Three other writers gave their views on writing. Marjory Lloyd, society editor of the Carmel Pine Cone, pictured the Pine Cone as a haven for beginning writers, many of whom have benefited from the poetry page and the long tradition of the paper as a publishing medium for the people of Carmel. She urged writers of prose and poetry to try their best efforts first with the Pine Cone, as now famous writers had done in the past. Ethel Jacobson, author of two books, Larks in My Hair and Mice in My Ink, kept the audience in stitches with her sidelights on writing light verse for the Saturday Evening Post and other national magazines. And William C. Estler, chief of public relations for the Stanford Research Institute, portrayed an era of wonderful living in the future as a result of major scientific discoveries in our way of life in a free democracy such as ours.

A record attendance enjoyed the dinner, the second since the Peninsula Branch was organized in Carmel last January. Nelo Drizari, president of the club, was toastmaster.

Heinz Blankenburg Gives Worthwhile Concert Here

By Eben Whittlesey

Bait to draw subscribers to the annual meeting of the Carmel Music Society is usually in the form of a worthwhile dividend concert, often featuring a young artist whose talent gives outstanding promise for the future. This year the lure was Heinz Blankenburg, a young American with a big voice and undoubted possibilities for the future. The warm reception extended him by what is generally thought to be a fairly critical audience was proof of the effectiveness of his presentation and his personality.

Opening selections by Carisimi and Monteverdi disclosed a large baritone voice of warm color and smooth quality. It is a voice which lends itself well to the Italian style. The first group concluded with Lieder von Gellert by Beethoven, a sombre, devout expression which brought out the singer's true baritone quality.

For a second group we heard a varied selection of the more familiar lieder by Brahms and Schumann. Dramatic power combined with tasteful restraint was shown in Der Soldat, while the tender and thoughtful Requiem, also by Schumann was sung with understanding and sincerity. Brahm's Sontag brought forth a lighter, very appealing mood. This was followed by the hushed and tender Swabian Folk song. Closing this group we heard Brahms Bergedlichessandchen, which transported us swiftly to a rollicking, humorous, almost martial attitude. The encore closing the first half of the concert was a haunting pastoral about a shepherd and his love.

Mr. Blankenburg has a fine and appealing voice that should develope into a powerful instrument. It is not yet fully controlled or balanced, and the range is somewhat limited. The singer made use of a falsetto at times. This is merely to say that there was a noticeable change in quality at times in the upper register.

After the intermission a French group contained two well-chosen Faure songs, Nel and Au Bord de l'eau and the familiar Vision Fugitive by Massenet. French diction left something to be desired, but the dramatic values and sincerity of presentation were thoroughly effective.

Turning to his English repertoire, Mr. Blankenburg opened with the rollicking Yarmouth Fair by Warlock. This was a little jerky and suffered from lack of smooth dynamics. On the other hand, the familiar Shenandoah was presented with warmth and real feeling. The singer is most effective in his more subdued passages. Little David Play on Your Harp was sung lightly, with perhaps too clipped enunciation. The singer's fine middle voice was well displayed in There Is a Balm in Gilead, but he tended to swoop too much at times. The appealing ballad He's Got the Whole World in His Hands brought the program to a rousing close, though a certain desirable freedom of interpretation was absent. As a first encore we heard the rousing aria from the fourth act of Marriage of Figaro. This drew enthusiastic response and prompted the singer to present an Irish folk tune arranged by Britten. The gentle, winning appeal of this song was followed by a contrasting aria from Andrea Chegny, very well done. In retrospect I felt Mr. Blankenburg was most effective in his Italian songs. If he fulfills the basic promise of his fine voice and outgoing personality, he should develope into a truly fine artist.

Susan Porter At MPC

Mrs. Susan Porter will make her third appearance before a Monterey Peninsula College audience tomorrow morning when she tells Irish folklore tales in the Student Union at 10:40 o'clock. The assembly is being sponsored by the college faculty and the public is invited to attend.

"No One From Carmel!"

"For the first time I have gone anywhere in the world since I came here to live I didn't meet anyone from Carmel," said Dr. Eric Berne when he returned on Saturday from a month's trip to Hawaii, the Fiji Islands and Samoa.

"I did see the names of a man from Salinas and a Monterey Peninsula couple in the register of the Korolevu Hotel, at a beach resort near Suva."

Dr. Berne made a pilgrimage to the grave of former Peninsula resident, Robert Louis Stevenson, in Samoa, and laid a pine branch on the author's mountain-top burial place in memory of the months Stevenson spent here enjoying our pine forests. Dr. Berne also went skin diving in Fiji and Samoa, saw hulas danced to ukelele and guitar music, and talked to doctors everywhere and visited hospitals. Now, looking tanned and fit, he is back at his psychiatric practice in San Francisco and Carmel and family life here with Mrs. Berne and their four children, Robin, Janice, Ricky and Terry.

Duttons Go East

Mrs. Fletcher Dutton is leaving next week on a trip East. First she will stop in Claremont and pick up her daughter, Jean, a sophomore at Pomona College. Then together they will drive to St. Louis, Missouri, to be present at Tony Dutton's graduation from Upper School at Principia. Tony will join his mother and sister for the rest of the trip to Grand Rapids, Michigan, Chicago, and the Grand Canyon. Tony plans to enter Pomona College in the fall. Mr. Dutton is unable to go to his son's graduation as he is on the teaching staff of the College of San Mateo and term does not end in time for him to travel with the rest of his family. But, he has his particular joy at the moment, he has been appointed to the staff of Monterey Peninsula College, teaching business subjects, and next year will be able to spend all his time here.

See Those Sea Otters

The Pine Cone told Carmelites to go down on the Point and see sea otters two months ago. Now, in the June issue of Sunset Magazine is an article on the otters, telling where they may be found along Highway 1 and about their habits, including the game of ping-pong which they play with a kelp ball.

Mixed with the otters this week end were groups of skin divers who were having a fine time off the River Beach riding the waves to shore. Maybe they will join the otters in a ping-pong match one day and a new Abalone league will be formed.

Second Sundays At Carmadon

Mrs. Grace Howden is reviving a gracious social custom, that of setting aside a certain day each month to be "at home" to one's friends. From now on Mrs. Howden will receive friends at her home, Carmadon, on San Mateo Road, on the second Sunday of each month from 2:00 to 5:00 o'clock in the afternoon. First of the informal "at homes" was held last Sunday afternoon, honoring Miss Margaret Jacks, when 50 friends called to enjoy a pleasant afternoon in Mrs. Howden's lovely garden. Next month Mrs. Howden has set aside the afternoon of June 10 for a similar party, and will continue to reserve the second Sunday afternoon of each month for her friends to have tea with her and listen to music.

Mac Lennans Return

Mr. and Mrs. William Mac Lennan (E. Cashion Mac Lennan) have returned to their home in Carmel after a two weeks' visit at the San Ysidro Ranch, Montecito, near Santa Barbara, where the Mac Lennans had lived for twenty years before coming to Carmel. They were much entertained during their visit with dinners, teas, and barbecues, besides enjoying daily swims in the ranch pool. A visit to the Ojai Music Festival, where Igor Stravinski conducted some of his own compositions, was a delightful occasion. They had met Stravinski some years ago at the Dome restaurant in Paris, together with George Antheil, Baroness Romaine and other musicians, and were happy to greet him again.

While in the South, Mrs. Mac Lennan visited the art exhibitions, especially the Tri-county exhibition at the Santa Barbara Museum of Art, where she has had three one-man shows. Another rewarding exhibition was that of Russell Cowles, in the Dalzell Hatfield Galleries in the Ambassador, Hotel, Los Angeles.

"I'm so excited," she says, "I have heard about Portugal all my life and now I'm going to see it."

Angie will also visit Italy, Germany and France, hearing music everywhere. She is going to the Bach Festival in Anspach and to hear Casals play, among other musical events on her itinerary. In the meantime for the first time in years Carmel's Bach Festival will have to do without Angie. Each winter she trains the Bach chorus under the director and joins him in the intensive training of the last few weeks before the festival. This year Gilbert Boyer has shared training duties with Angie and will take over when she leaves.

She will be back in time to resume teaching duties in the music department of Monterey Peninsula College when school opens in the fall.

in the afternoon, Livingston is meeting with the city council, at that body's request. The council also has raised objections to Livingston's plan in its present form.

A letter from the County Planning Commission to the Carmel Planning Commission, about the county's reaction to Carmel's recommendations about Hatton Terrace subdivision, led the Carmel Commission to state that something must be done as soon as possible to establish larger building sites in the R-1 area around Carmel, zoned for subdivisions of minimum lot size of 6,000 square feet. The city attorney was asked to draw up a plan for action and the commission stated they wished to work with Carmel Valley property owners and those of the coastal area. The commission feels that immediate co-operation will accomplish the re-zoning of adjacent areas for action by the County Planning Commission.

Also out of the Hatton Terrace discussion rose the matter of establishing park districts around Carmel so that land proposed for parks on the Master Plan, such as Hatton Terrace, might be saved from subdivision. The city attorney was asked to frame action in this matter.

Dealing with routine business the Planning Commission allowed Johnston Bird to establish three building sites on his property at Rio Road and San Carlos Streets. Gladys McCloud was given permission to remodel the front of Pilot's Market, following the commission's recommendation for reducing size of plate glass sections. D. Kirke Erskine had his plans for a confectionery tentatively approved, subject to examination by the building inspector. Erskine's building is on the east side of Dolores between Fifth and Sixth Streets. Approval was given four proposed school building sites, additions to Woods and River, the proposed Valley School and 10 acres on the property formerly wanted by the Firestone Company. A letter was read from the State Division of Highways saying that the Highway route south of Carmel Valley intersection marked on Larry Livingston's Master Plan map was not in accordance with the proposed state freeway route. Announcement was made of the formation of a State Planning Agency which will help cities and counties obtain Federal grants for their planning programs. A letter from Gordon Campbell protesting the Livingston plan for Junipero Street and the business district was held to be read at a public hearing on the plan.

Pharaoh, Original Poetic Drama, For Forest Theater

public as a dramatist.

The present play, Pharaoh, is in four acts: a prose prologue laid in modern Egypt, followed by a dream sequence of three acts in the days of that country's early greatness, 4000 years ago, and ending with a very brief modern epilogue. The story is that of a middle-aged failure, going through the land of the Pharaohs with a party of Egyptologists, who falls asleep and becomes a most important figure in the period of Egypt's glory. He has ambition and power in contrast to his real existence, but in the end finds something (not uranium!) much more worthwhile. The prologue is rich in comedy, while the play proper is romance and adventure of a high poetic quality. The dates of the production of Pharaoh are set for the first three week-ends in August.

Scottish Terrier Takes First Award At Del Monte Show

By BETH INGELS

The finest dogs of the West, 980 of them, were on hand last Sunday to compete for honors in the 31st Annual All Breed Dog Show of the Del Monte Kennel Club. In the exciting and final judging for best in show, a black and silver Scottish Terrier, C. Cantie Confident owned by Marguerite J. Fuller of Chula Vista, walked away with the silver bowl trophy offered by Mr. and Mrs. S. F. B. Morse.

A crowd estimated at around 5,000 attended the event, which was held in the area in front of Del Monte Lodge facing the ocean. According to Derek Rayne, corresponding secretary of the club, this is the first time in the history of the organization that a Scottish Terrior won the coveted honor. Last year's trophy was won by an Afghan Hound, and the first, in 1925, was won by a Wire Haired Fox Terrier.

Just before the final judging of the day, a brief ceremony was held in which Derek Rayne was presented with the Henry Gaines award for "development and sportsmanship" by Henry Tiedeman, president of the DMKC, and also received a scroll from Capt. Will Judy, editor of Dog World for his continuing effort and activity on behalf of the club.

Group Winners were: Sporting Breeds, parti-color Cocker Spaniel, Ch. Wilco's Mr. Barnes, owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wilson of Van Nuys, judged by Mrs. Will Judy. Hound Breeds, Long Haired Dachshund, Forever Langesk Lucky Strike, owned by Charlotte R. Sibley of San Francisco and judged by Mrs. Marion F. Florseim. Working Dogs, Doberman Pinscher, Quo Vadis of Naumanheim, owned by Jack A. Dexter of Hollywood, judged by Len Carey. Toy Group, Pekingese, Ch. Shanlin Sing Lee, owned by Mrs. Adolph Rushaupt of Fresno, judged by Mrs. Edith Nash. Poodles, Ch. Marney's Marquis de Lafayette, owned by Mrs. Harold J. Durney of Berkeley and judged by Frank Foster Davis. Springer Spaniels were judged best brace in show, competing with Welsh Terriers and Samoyedes.

Although no local dogs competed for final honors, several won in their classes. Local dogs shown included entries from Atherstone Kennels, Mrs. Nina Force, Edwin L. Green and Elizabeth M. Simpson, all of Pebble Beach, and George B. Davidson of Carmel. Because of the time involved in judging, there was no local group this year.

"Those foothills of the Rockies on the eastern slope around Golden have been prospected over and over again for copper and gold," said Caleb, "Boyd and I thought we'd look for uranium and we found our pitchblende."
